Always For The First Time by Andre Breton (Read by A Poetry Channel) Nadja By Andre Breton

Nadja, the second book published by André Breton, is one of the iconic works of the French surrealist movement. It begins with the question "Who am I?" It is based on Breton's actual interactions with a young woman, Nadja, over the course of ten days, and is presumed to be a semi-autobiographical description of his relationship with a mad patient of Pierre Janet. The book's non-linear structure is grounded in reality by references to other Paris surrealists such as Louis Aragon and 44 ...

Nadja is a work of surrealist fiction by the French writer Andre Breton. Published in 1928, the novel takes place over a period of ten days, telling the story of the relationship between the narrator – who is also named Andre Breton – and a woman called Nadja. Featuring a non-linear structure and making heavy use of improbable coincidences, Nadja balances a realistic core relationship with narrative aspects that highlight its artificial, fictional structure.

Nadja (André Breton) — Wikipédia

When André spent a lot of time with Nadja in the beginning of their relationship, he discovered more of himself and what the world really is like through the eyes of Nadja (or so he thought). A prime example was once when they were going for a walk, and Nadja pointed at a black window stating that it would turn red in just a few moments.

Nadja book by André Breton

André Robert Breton was a French writer and poet. He is known best as the co-founder, leader, principal theorist and chief apologist of surrealism. His writings include the first Surrealist Manifesto of 1924, in which he defined surrealism as "pure psychic automatism". Along with his role as leader of the surrealist movement he is the author of celebrated books such as Nadja and L'Amour fou. Those activities combined with his critical and theoretical work for writing and the plastic arts ...
